

TEACHERS' INSTITUTE HERE IF IT HAS TO BE OUR OWN.

But James S. Darr's Suggestion at School Board Meeting Was Only for Future Reference.

DIVORCE CHURCH FROM STATE

Directors Object to Sunday School Being Held in Greenwood Building. O'Connor Fights Losing Battle Against Demerit System.

Connellsville is going to have a teachers' institute here if it has to be one of its own. That was the sentiment at last night's meeting of the School Board, but the matter was brought by James S. Darr for future reference and not present action. It may be that the School Directors in this end of the county may make one final effort to land a County Superintendent who will bring the county institute here before finally divorcing the Connellsville schools from the big show. Things look gloomy for the county institute as Uniontown threatens also to have a side show.

Divorce the church from the state and keep the Sunday schools out of the public schools was the sentiment expressed by Dr. T. H. White. The union Sunday school has been using the Greenwood building and the teachers held objection because a number of articles have been mislaid of late. When school convenes Monday morning a canvass usually shows several drawing pencils missing, together with other articles of little value.

The Board discussed the matter of firing the Sunday school out into the cold, cold world for a long time and finally compromised by having a committee of three appointed to investigate the matter. Metzgar, Dr. Edle and Baisley landed the job. Baisley wanted Armstrong on the committee because he was so strong for the Sunday school. The school has between 40 and 50 children in attendance each Sunday afternoon and both rooms have been used. Only one side of the Greenwood building is used as the furnace which heats the other side is out of order. The Sunday school will probably be asked to repair the furnace and use the room which is not occupied by the public school classes.

Only one conflict arose during the meeting and that was over the demerit system that has been adopted in the High School. It cannot be said that the Directors were softened when they learned that a similar system, only more strict, had been enforced for the past four years, but they approved the present plan after considerable talk. Director Frank O'Connor, Jr., led the fight against the system. He offered no alternative method of preserving discipline, but he lost his temper and went after Dr. White rough when the latter interrupted an objection to hearing a lecture on the system by E. M. Gross, ex-school teacher, former letter carrier, one time locomotive engineer and now in the revenue service. Gross came up at the request of O'Connor, who determined he should be heard. He was.

The system adopted in the High School, and which has worked successfully for the past three years, provides for demerits for misconduct on the part of the pupil while he is under school authority. When a pupil gets 10 demerits he is hauled before the faculty and given a severe going over. If the number runs up to 15, he will be suspended by the Superintendent or recommended to the School Board for expulsion. All pupils getting 10 demerits will be required to take all final examinations.

The pupils are given a behavior mark of 80 at the beginning of the term. Reports are made every six weeks and the pupil going the distance without a demerit will have 2 per cent. added to his behavior mark. For each demerit 2 per cent. will be deducted. It is possible for a pupil to leave the school at the end of the term with a conduct percentage of 100.

The system was explained by Principal B. P. Coburn. Superintendent Duffinbaugh explained that a similar system had been in operation for the past four years, but has been modified each term. The present system is the most lenient yet. The Board is asked for the first time to give its formal approval of the plan. Both school men say the discipline in the schools here is exceptionally good and there is a disposition on the part of the pupils to study hard.

After the matter had been explained the fireworks began. O'Connor declared the teachers have no right to use such a system. He declared that teachers will play favorites and that some one is bound to get the short end of it. James S. Darr also said he could not see where the pupil had any redress. His attention was called to the Grievance Committee, which adjusts such difficulties. O'Connor declared the demerit system is the best.

HILLSIDE BRICK FOR NORTH PITTSBURG ST.

Contractor McCormick Starts on Preliminary Work For Repairs—Burgess Evans Issues Permit.

Contractor William McCormick began work this morning on the repairs that are to be made to the Second National Bank building. North Pittsburg street is being torn up in front of the building. It is believed that when the building was erected a water pipe became broken, and water has been filtering through into the basement of the structure.

There was considerable delay in getting the work started. The A. & S. Wilson Company delayed paying its paving assessment and filing a bond to guarantee the work, and until this was done Burgess Evans refused to issue a permit. The matter was adjusted last night, when Burgess Evans issued the paper. McCormick started worked today. When he has concluded this, the entire street will be repaved with hillside brick. This section of North Pittsburg street will hold the borough record of having been paved three times, and twice within a few weeks.

CENTRAL BANK SCHEME IS TOLD.

All Sections Are to Be Represented on the Board of Directors.

COMMERCIAL FIELD IS LIMIT

Will Have Capital Stock of $100,000,000 Held by National State Banks—Can Come to Rescue of Other Banks in Time of Need.

United Press Telegram. WASHINGTON, Oct. 5.—Although the plan is not yet completed the scheme for the proposed Central Bank of the United States which will be recommended by the monetary commission, according to authentic sources, will be essentially a bankers' bank, or agency to do business with other banks. It will not receive deposits from the public or do any general banking. Its main function being to act as fiscal agent of the Government, through its large note issuing capacity to come to the relief of other banks in times of emergency.

It will be organized with a capital stock of $100,000,000, the stock to be apportioned among the National and probably the State banks, with provisions prohibiting any bank from acquiring voting rights in excess of its quota.

The stockholders will elect a Board of Directors by territorial districts. In this manner it is claimed, all sections of the country will have representation on the board. There will also be a board composed of government directors, its members to be leading officials of the Treasury Department. The two boards will co-operate in the management.

The active officers of the bank will be elected for life, or during their good behavior. The purpose of this is to keep the institution free from politics. Government money will be kept in the bank and branches will supply the sub-treasuries in other cities. It will issue notes to supplant bonds. The notes are to be secured by a large gold reserve and commercial credit. No loans will be made on discounts, bonds, stocks, real estate, etc. The operations of the bank will be confined strictly to the commercial field.

Advocates of the scheme say it will give the country organization the cohesion in banking they have always lacked.

NO MORE SIGNALS FOR TRAINS ON THE B. & O.

Trains of Two or More Sections Will Not Carry Green Flags and Lights.

A new departure in railroading has been adopted by the Baltimore & Ohio system by which classification signals have been discarded. Hereafter when two or more sections of a train are run the leading sections will not carry green flags on the engines, nor will they blow the familiar long and two short blasts that have become so familiar.

The operation of trains by this method, is now left up to the train dispatcher, the operators and the block system. The block system has been made absolute, which, in railroad parlance means no more trains can go past under a green or caution signal. ### DUMBAULD ENTERS LIBEL SUIT

Lydia M. Oakes Says She Signed Contract But It Was Not Carried Out According to Her Understanding With Charles Miller.

UNIONTOWN, Oct. 5.—The tale of a note that was paid stolen, and entered once for judgment was aired in court this morning when Attorney Frank P. Cotton appeared for Steve Saterakos to have the judgment lifted from his goods and chattels. After hearing the evidence the request of the plaintiff was allowed.

It appears that one George Grancouras once held Saterakos' note for $400, which was later paid. Then the note disappeared and not long ago Grancouras entered it in court, secured judgment against Saterakos and had his Uniontown candy store, better known as the Sugar Bowl, closed up by the Sheriff.

Saterakos appealed to Attorney Cotton, who entered an action. Testimony was taken this morning supporting Saterakos' allegations, and the note was cancelled. Grancouras has it is alleged, gone to Alaska.

Lydia M. Oakes of Redstone township, who has been sued by Charles Miller of Washington county to recover $3,500 alleged to be due on a contract, has filed her affidavit of defense. She admits making the contract but asks to be relieved from responsibility. She claims that she agreed to purchase 100 acres of land from Miller in West Pike Run township, Washington county. Miller owned a much larger tract, but agreed to sell the 100 acres. A barn and spring were to be included, while of the 40 acres of new land, which is of small value she was to have only 25 acres.

When the lines were run, the spring was not included. The 25 acres of new land were half of the barn remained on Miller's property. Mrs. Oakes not only asks to be relieved from her contract, but wants Miller to return the $200 paid him when the contract was made.

The Stratton Lewis Company has filed additional reasons in support of its motion to enter judgment for want of sufficient affidavit of defense on the part of the Penn Bridge Company. The company says the defendant claims the bill is $4,000 too much, but does not go into necessary details.

Steve Livhos pleaded guilty to the larceny of a watch three shirts and a pair of socks from Mike Scabo. He goes to jail for 90 days. Steve says he took the articles because he needed them.

Judgment has been entered against the High House Brewing Company for $2975 in favor of Charles and Mary Jones. No affidavit of defense was filed.

Attorney George Patterson has been named master in the divorce suit of Martha Galtner against B. F. Galtner. J. S. McKee of Connellsville was named administrator in the estate of Sarah McKee. Bond in the sum of $1,500 was furnished with S. E. Brock and R. S. Matthews as sureties.

FALL OPENING OF KOBACKERS' STORE.

Large Crowd Saw Pretty
Hats and Stunning Gowns
Last Evening.

STORE COMPLETELY REMODELED

Decorations Suggestive of Autumn
Were Especially Attractive—Opening Will Continue This Evening.

The first annual opening of the Kobacker store is being held. Last night at 7:30 o'clock the doors of the store were thrown open to the public and it is estimated that during the evening fully 3,000 people witnessed the display of merchandise on exhibition for their inspection. The crowd was the largest between the hours of 8 and 9 o'clock. During that time it was almost impossible to wade one's way to the rear of the store where large pink roses and small pocket mirrors were given as souvenirs. One of the attractions was a well selected musical program rendered by Kiefer's orchestra.

The store has been handsomely improved since bought by the Kobackers. The floor space is much larger and large display cases have been placed on each side in the front of the store. Large cases have also been arranged in the rear of the store for the display of ladies' suits. Kobacker's store is one of the finest in Connelville since being remodeled. Special attention is paid to millinery and ladies suits, an exclusive line of the latter being handled. All the newest shades and latest cuts of suits were exhibited while the display of ladies' evening dresses and cloaks was large. The millinery department in charge of Mrs. B. Reichstein was the center of attraction for the ladies, the stunning hats being inspected and admired by all who attended the opening. Mrs. Fultz is trimmer in this department. The store throughout is in gala attire for the occasion. The display of children's goods was equally as great. The pretty decorations are due to the artistic work of David Silverman, decorator for the Mt. Pleasant store of the Kobackers and Mr. Craig of Pittsburgh. The decorations were suggestive of autumn. Lattice work covered with trailing autumn vines was arranged at intervals on each of the ledges running the entire length of the store. Draped between the spaces were placed ferns and palms. The counters were adorned with handsome pieces of drawn work and elmy work. The windows were in keeping with the interior of the store. Not for some time have display windows attracted so much attention. An arrangement of lattice work covered with autumn vine formed a pretty background for the gorgeous display of millinery, evening gown and wraps. The opening will also be held this evening and all who attend will be given a courteous welcome by the managers and salesladies. Among the out of town people who attended the opening last evening were Mrs. Theodore Israel of McKeesport; Miss Ruth Kobacker, H. Kobacker of Mt. Pleasant and Sidney Holdstock of New York.

A CROWDED HOUSE SAW ST. ELMO PLAYED

At the Solpso Theatre Last Evening—
Big House Most Agreeably Surprised.

Quite a surprise was sprung at the Solpso theatre last night by "St. Elmo." The company, which expected a fair house, received one of the largest crowds of the season, while the audience was, in turn, agreeably surprised at the production. The company was one of the best appearing that has visited Connelville for many months. The stage settings were complete in every detail and unusually elaborate. The costumes were above reproach.

The play was enjoyed to the fullest extent. The fact that practically all had read the book of the same name added interest to the attraction. Miss Margaret Lindsay as "Edna Earl," and William Blackmore in the title role, were the stars and made a big hit with the audience.

Basketball prospects at the Y. M. C. A. are unusually bright this year. A meeting of the enthusiasts was held last evening at which time Robert Morton was elected manager and E. C. Thomas captain. There is good material for every position save center. Usher, the most likely candidate for that position, is handicapped by defective eyesight. This affects his work shooting goals.

Morton and Morton will likely be the forwards this year, with a big field of guards to choose from. Captain Thomas, Brickman, Wagoner and William Myers are out for those two positions. Myers started on the High School team last year.

HOME FROM NOVA SCOTIA.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Beall Had Been on Four Months' Visit.

UNIONTOWN, Oct. 5.—Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Beall returned Saturday night after spending four months in Nova Scotia. They were most of the time with their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Coll, at St. John's, but Mr. Beall was also hunting in the wilds of Guysboro and Halifax counties and had good luck, especially in bagging woodcock and partridge. Guysboro is a county without a railroad. Mr. and Mrs. Beall had the best of health and their trip was an ideal one.

Mr. Moore is Here.
Operating Manager W. E. Moore of the West Penn. is in Connelville today. He attended the weekly staff meeting of officials here.

TEACHERS' INSTITUTE HERE

clared the Brown system of demerits used on the railroads is objected to by the best engineers on the road, but Dr. White objected to having the school system of Connelville being compared to the railroads. Secretary Thomas advanced the argument that if there was any favoritism in the schools, this system would end it as there is a certain demerit for a certain offense. O'Connor asked to have E. M. Gross make a few remarks, explaining that Mr. Gross was an old railroad man who had seen the demerit system in operation.

"Keep the railroads out of the schools," suggested Dr. White. Then O'Connor lost his temper. The Board wasn't anxious to have any more talk on the matter, but O'Connor and Darr combined forces and Gross was heard.

Gross explained the demerit system as worked at the Mt. Pleasant Institute and declared it encouraged dishonesty among the pupils. His explanation of the system was based on reports the pupils were required to make to their teachers. It was explained by Superintendent Deffenbaugh that in the schools here there is no reporting system and demerits are charged only for offenses that come to the notice of the teacher.

"We do not chalk up demerits for every little offense," explained the Superintendent. "If a teacher catches a pupil talking, a warning will be given, and unless the case is unusual, no demerit is made unless the warning is ignored."

Dr. E. L. Edie favored the demerit system. He was the only Connelville High School graduate in the room. He declared if there had been a system like this when he went to school he would have learned more.

"There was no demerit system in those days and mighty little discipline," he said.

A vote was taken and O'Connor was the only one who dissented from approving the system.

Various routine matters were discussed. Director Metzger reported having talked with Town Council relative to a sidewalk along Race street. That body can do nothing, it is said, until the street is filled in beyond Patterson avenue, but as soon as this is done the matter of pavements will be taken up. The Council suggested that the School Board might set a good example by laying a walk in front of its South Side building. The matter was held over. The matter of exonerations on the West Side for 1907 and 1908 was taken up. Chairman Armstrong of the Finance Committee reported that the 1907 exonerations asked had been cut down after consideration by the committee.

In the general fund of that year $25.75 was asked, but only $60.95, plus the five per cent, making $64.00 was allowed. The building fund was reduced from $12.48 to $9.10. Of the 1908 taxes, exonerations of $75.50 in the general fund and $10.93 in the building fund were allowed. The Board approved this report.

During the past month the order was paid for the Greenwood school building and except for the legal points involved, this matter is now a closed incident, both Connelville and Dunbar township being satisfied.

The Supply Committee reported that telephones have been installed in the West Side buildings, hemp matting has been ordered for the floors of the Fourth Ward building and rubber matting for the South Side school. Bids were taken and contract awarded for printing 500 copies of the course of study in the schools and also for 2,200 report cards. A number of old books were disposed of. The teachers' room in the Second Ward school will be furnished with a table and chairs.

The visitors during the past month reported. Conditions were found to be the best except for overcrowding in the High School, three rooms being used in the Fourth Ward building for these pupils. Darr, Edie, O'Connor, Forzwall and Metzger were the visitors. In the Second Ward school the seats in room No. 3 are too high and will be changed. The Building Committee was directed to see about having lights in the Fourth street school on the West Side. The rooms in this building are very dark in winter. The Building Committee was ordered to see about sewerage the Greenwood building.

Superintendent Deffenbaugh reported the enrollment to be 2,045 while the percentage of attendance was 97. The average reached 1,864. There were 189 visits by patrons and 82 by Directors during the first school month. The library had been secured this year for the societies for $5 a month, the same as last year. The class in High School, Superintendent Deffen-baugh stated, in the best entering class in the past four years and at a recent teachers' meeting objection was entered only against two or three pupils as being back in their work.

The Board authorized the payment of $500 to the Carnegie Free Library. Dr. G. W. Gallagher was appointed the third member to represent the School Board as a Library trustee. Rose and Darr are the other two members.

The following visiting committee was appointed to serve during the present month: Greenwood, Moore; High School, Thomas; Second Ward, White; Third Ward, Hall; Fourth Ward, Ash; South Side, Gallagher; Sixth and Seventh Wards, Balsley.

UP-TO-DATE MASSAGE.

A Better Way Has Been Found Than the Old Systems.

Is your face your fortune? It often is. Certainly a poor face, which always means an unhealthy one, is the greatest misfortune. The first beauty requisite is blooming health of the skin, and fortunately that is now possible for every one. Only two requisites are needed: a cleansing, healing skin food, in connection with massage based on true principles.

The first essential is Crown Cream, as it contains nourishing elements that cannot be had in any other preparation. It can even be used without massage, and its splendid effect upon the skin blotches, pimples and wasted places is little short of magical. Of course its beneficial action can be greatly increased and quickened by the use of massage.

Those who do not fully understand this art will be greatly interested in the Harlan Beauty Cup, with which every woman is at once an expert. It pumps all impurities from the skin's pores, eradicates wrinkles quickly, and by its action in building up the lower skin layers, makes it almost impossible for the wrinkles to return. You should own both these toilet articles now, as we are just entering the most trying season of the year for complexion troubles. The price of the Crown Cream is 50c a jar, and the Beauty Cup 50c each. They may be had of all up-to-date dealers, or will be sent, postpaid, upon receipt of price, by the Harlan Mfg. Co., Toledo, O.

WEST VIRGINIA'S
UNFAIR TAX PLANS.

The plans of the West Virginia
Republican State Administration,
to raise revenues sufficient to pay the expenses of State government and to largely reduce those of local government by a direct tax on natural gas production, eighty per centum of which will be paid by Pennsylvania,
and a marked increase in the taxation
of coal lands, much if not a majority of which are held by Pennsylvanians, does not receive the united support of the West Virginia press. Though it has the sanction of party endorsement
not all the Republican papers give it open and zealous support, while many of the Democratic papers oppose it.
It is charged that this opposition is political, but it will have to be judged by its logic just now for it is political and how far politics, how far just and how far wise. Concerning the politics of the situation we have nothing to do, save to suggest that there are perhaps quite a few policies on one side as the other. We stand only for justice to Pennsylvanians.

The Fairmont Times accused of opposing the measures because it is a Democratic paper, but there are no politics visible to the naked eye in the reasons it gives for its position.
None are necessary. The logic is all with the opposition to these buccanering measures. Their Republican supporters can defend them on no other than the primitive law of uncivilized times, that might makes right.

The Fairmont Times, after copying a lengthy editorial protest made by The Courier against the injustice proposed to be done to Pennsylvania coal land investors and Pennsylvania gas
consumers, says:

We publish in this issue an article from The Connelville Courier which is indicative of the growing feeling of outside investors as to the instability of investments in West Virginia. Of course if we are prepared to say that we do not need or want additional capital to develop the resources of this state, we can afford to threaten continuous taxation and repel such offered aid, but it seems to us that we heard back in the years when the Republican party was struggling to get possession of the office in West Virginia much about the non-progressive policy of the Bourbons of the State and the great things that might be expected in the way of inducing capital to come into it for its development when Republicans got control. The Bourbons might not have been progressive but they were at least never so hostile to outside capital as to alarm investment and check development as has been done in the last eight years and which promises to go on indefinitely under the policy which has been adopted by those in control at this time.

Pennsylvania people, as we have already stated, do not ask any favors,
but only fair play, and they are certainly entitled to that much from our neighboring State whose resources Pennsylvania capital more than any other has helped to develop and whose growth and prosperity Pennsylvanians
more than any other citizens have promoted.

ANOTHER BRYAN THEORY
IN DANGER OF DISPROVAL.

Oklahoma's Bryanque Bank Guaranty law has received a rude jolt the very first round. A State bank has failed for three million dollars and there isn't in the guaranty fund one-tenth of that sum. The State is going to pay the depositors and levy a tax of two per centum on all bank deposits
throughout the State to make up the deficiency. The banks will resist the collection of this tax, because they say it is illegal. A lot of litigation is in sight and its net results may possibly be the elimination of the law altogether.

The Oklahoma plan was the product of Colonel Bryan's fanciful mind.
Whatever may be the verdict of history concerning the statesmanship of the Man from Nebraska, it will never be asserted that his financial plans withstood the test of experience. They have looked brilliant, but they never endured, and the Oklahoma plan does not promise to be any exception to the rule. Like all the others it is a beautiful theory, but it does not work
well in practice.

There were a great many hard-headed financiers who objected to the plan
when it was originally proposed on the ground that it would tend to unsound finance and make one set of men responsible for the operations of others.

A SUMMER RESORT
BUT NOT A WATERING PLACE.

Johnstown is in grave danger of a water famine. The water company in public advertisements begs the people to be economical with the water, and the press echoes the warning. The Tribune says that the available water supply is at a dangerously low point, there being less than fifteen feet in the Dalton reservoir, which is falling at the rate of over a foot a day, while all the other reservoirs for domestic supply are entirely empty.

It has not been long since the Johnstown Democrat was telling us in beautifully embroidered language that Johnstown was a summer resort of first excellence. Johnstown might sus-tain a claim of this kind if it not too closely pressed for detailed specifications, but she could never, in the face of the above confession, claim herself
off on the outside world as a watering place.

The Connelville School Board is inclined to think there is no relation between public schools and Sunday schools, and the conclusion is amply justified. If there is any principle which is unequivocally set forth in the Constitution it is the absolute divorce-ment of Church and State and individual freedom of conscience. The Courier has always held that the church was the proper place to teach religion; in the public schools, never.

Indian Summer weather.

New York has legislated the pool
sellers out of business at the race tracks, but it has been discovered that
"memory brokers" are doing a thriving business. It's pretty hard to beat the game when men are determined to bet.

President Taft is swinging around
a big circle, but he is a big man.

Doctor Parkhurst has ordered New York politics. The Doctor just can't stay away from the limelight's dazzling radiance.

Wayward girls from other towns are warned not to open offices on Con-nelville's principal street corners.

A widow with a large family of dependent children ought to be allowed to engage in any decent employment without the interference of the law.

The theatrical season is fairly on.

Columbus Day celebration promises to make Connelville one of the centers of hilarity and gaily on October 12.

The suicide of a Connelville college student with a bad stomach suggests the idea that after all college achievements may have their reasonable uses.

The establishment of an auto bus
between Brownsville and Washington
looks like the rejuvenation of the National Pike.

John Bull—With all your great airships, inventions and discoveries, seems to me that we ought to discover some way to get rid of these burdens

SCOTSDALE TOWN COUNCIL MEETS.

Mill Town Solons Hold Up
Citizen's Water Company's bills.

A POOR PRESSURE IS ALLEGED

Sunday Poker Players Behind Baptist Church in North Scottdale Lose $10
Each—Browntown Woods Is Under Surveillance—Other News Notes

SCOTSDALE, Oct. 5.—With but one to make up the necessary quorum, Scottdale's Town Council met in their regular monthly session last evening and consumed more than three hours in discussing the water company's bills, which there has been no meeting of the council for some time. Those present last evening were A. P. Byrne, T. W. Porter, J. F. Berry, H. G. Maria, J. F. Hardy, William Butler and M. L.

Hawes, the last named being absent on business.

One of the items of last night was the filing up of the bill of the Citizens' Water Company for the water supplied for the last quarter. For years and years things have been done in Council to the water company, but so far nothing has seemed to come from the actions, the proceedings of Council slipping like the proverbial water from a duck's back, when applied to the water company. The old complaint of a poor pressure was the basis for holding up the payment of the bill and the water company will be expected to make good the pressure and bring it up to a stage where it will be all right.

The Hammond Fire Brick Company of Fairmont, W. Va., which has supplied the brick for paving several streets in town has filed a lien against the Borough for brick furnished for Market street, which was paved by Harry Hall & Company of Homestead, who have not settled with the brick company, and the Borough having refused to settle with Mr. Hall until he should pay the brick concern. The lien is under a new law, and is an amicable matter upon the part of the brick company and the collection of the lien will impose no costs upon the Borough. The amount is $1,500.

The police signal lights that the Bell Telephone Company offered to provide telephone service for, at want the Council thought an exorbitant rate considering the benefits accruing from the town to the telephone people came up for consideration. Representatives of the telephone company have expressed a willingness to make some better concessions to the town.

Mr. Matz reported that some more natural gas hunting had been accomplished during the month, and that there are many evidences that the disturbances in the sewers comes from the natural product and not from sewer gas.

Sunday Poker Players
The sports of North Scottdale had a bucket last evening when three forfeits of $10 each were confiscated after more than an hour's wait in the court of Justice of the Peace H. C. Hubbs.

Convicted C. M. Haines of the Fourth Ward had been receiving several complaints about poker playing on Sunday among the colored gamblers of North Scottdale and on Sunday he deputized Police Chief Frank McCudden and Policemen August Fyde and visited the subterranean game room in a split game right back of the Colored Baptist Church. A jack pot of $3.50 and a dock of cards were gathered in and three fellows caught. A couple more got away but are known and will be picked up if they don't come in and more cuffs will be set upon them for their larrying. The three that were nabbed put up $10 each for a hearing but failed to appear. The constable has his eye open for some poker players that are making the Browntown woods a regular hang out on Sundays and they will be next in the net.

Visited the Furnace
William Smith, Superintendent of the Genesee furnace at Charlotte, N. Y., who has been visiting W. H. Everhart, Superintendent of the Scottdale furnace for several days accompanied by the latter gentleman spent yesterday visiting the Dunbar furnace.

A Candidate in Town
Charles C. Crowell, the hustling candidate for Judge on the Republican ticket spent a few hours in town yesterday afternoon meeting many friends and receiving much encouragement in his campaign. Attorney Crowell is meeting with great interest in his candidacy. The town of the nomination went strongly for the publicana ticket, but since he did not win they are solid for the one who did, so that Mr. Crowell will be a winner here.

Additions to the Census List
Born to Mr. and Mrs. W. Sampson Willy, a daughter on Saturday night Born to Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Park on a son, whose name will be Frank Rath Parker, Jr.

Health Has Been Good Health Officer F. P. Goshorn says that last month the health record of Scottdale showed only four cases of typhoid fever and so far this month none reported. The epidemic of measles was the worst one during the year but great care was exercised during its prevalence and no fatalities were reported. Scottdale is a very healthy town.

Capitol Is Closed
The Capitol bowling alleys and pool rooms are closed until this evening on account of the death of a brother of William Screman, the proprietor, at Middleport, N. Y.

ALL HOPE ABANDONED

Little Headway Made in Rescuing Man Buried Alive
New York, Oct. 5.—All hope of rescuing John Coffey, the young farmer of Central Islip, L. I., who was buried alive sixty feet below the surface of the earth by the collapse of a well in which he was working, has been abandoned.

The progress of sinking a second shaft to the level at which the cave in occurred has been so slow that it is now believed that the prisoner must surely have been smothered by the sand or drowned by the mounting water in the well. Diggers are still at work.

HAIR TELLS CHARACTER.

Color of Hair Said to Indicate a Person's Temperament

Many people believe that blonde or light hair denotes affection and dark hair constancy. A person without hair is not devoid of character far from it. The disposition of the average bald headed man is to show such solicitude for the welfare of others, that he neglects himself. A germ causes baldness. Prof. Sabouraud, of Paris, France, in inoculated a rabbit with Dandruff germs causing it to become totally bald in five weeks' time. To rid the scalp of these dangerous germs it is necessary to apply Newbro's Herpicide.

"Destroy the cause—you remove the effect."
Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. One dollar bottles guaranteed by Graham & Co. Special Agents.

On Killing Snakes.

The fact that some snakes eject poison against their enemies is held to justify their indiscriminate extinction. We fail to see how they did not have the choice of their means of defense, they necessarily took what the Lord gave them and they act as instinct directs.

OPENING EYES OF NEW YORKERS.

Wright Makes a Wonderful Flight Along Hudson River.

PASSES OVER BIG WARSHIPS

By Most Spectacular Feat Dayton
Aviator Places Himself in Rank
With Hudson and Fulton—Flies 10
Miles Up Hudson to Grant's Tomb.

New York, Oct. 5.—An aeroplane flashed past the white dome of Grant's tomb, then turning gracefully in mid-air over the water of the Hudson, shot like a falcon back to Governor's Island, ten miles away. Wilbur Wright of Dayton, O., thus placed his name in the ranks with Hudson and Fulton in one of the most spectacular feats in the history of aeronautics.

Over the masts of warships, from whose decks the hoarse cheers of the sailors were borne up to him in his

WILBUR WRIGHT.

elevated seat, he flew for twenty miles
—ten miles up and ten miles back—remaining in the air for thirty-three minutes and thirty-three seconds and alighting at the aerodrome without mishap.

During the flight business was practically at a standstill in all that part of Manhattan from which a view of his remarkable performance was available. Harbor craft shrieked their applause, cheer after cheer swept up from the banks of the Hudson and the lower bay—for the Dayton aviator had "made good," crowning the aviation program of the Hudson-Fulton celebration with a record.

Conditions Not the Best.

The flight was made under conditions only moderately favorable. When Wright reached Governor's Island the wind was blowing about ten miles an hour, while an overcast sky added to the uncertainty of the weather. Everything ready, his mechanical gave the motor a twist and amid the clatter of the machine's exhaust which sounded like musketry fire, Wright climbed to his seat in his aeroplane.

With the same imperturbable demonstrator which has characterized all of his flights, the aviator pulled his cap
over his eyes and reached for the starting lever. In a moment the machine was off.
Almost indistinguishable against the gray backed clouds the machine screamed past old Castle Williams and soon entered the canon made by the great skyscrapers of Manhattan island and the Jersey hills. At this point the aeroplane was flying at a height of nearly 200 feet, but unexpected air currents caused by the great buildings moved the aviator to bring his craft closer to the water.

Passes Over Warships.

Over the warships of four great powers he passed, his progress marked by cheers by the sailors of his own country and those of Great Britain, Germany, France and Italy. The bluejackets lined the rails of their ships and gazed in wonderment at the little craft above them, perhaps thinking vaguely that some day it might render their own monster fighting machines obsolete.

When the air vessel reached the British cruiser Argyll, anchored an eighth of a mile above Grant's tomb,
Wright brought his direction runners into play and, describing an easy and graceful curve, started on his return journey down the river. The wind conditions which had bothered him on the journey up were now more favorable and it was here that the speed possibilities of the machine were demonstrated. While the ten miles up stream occupied nearly twenty minutes the return flight was made in little more than thirteen minutes, or at a rate approximately of forty-two miles an hour.

Expect Confession From Lamphere.
Lamphere, Ind., Oct. 5.—Ray Lam-phere, who was convicted as an accomplice of the arch-murderer, Mrs.
Guinness, has but a few days more to live, according to prison physicians.
He is suffering from consumption.
State's Attorney Skith is confident he will make a confession clearing everything in the Guinness death farm mystery.

ASLEEP SIX DAYS.

Woman's Case in Pittsburgh Hospital
Puzzles the Physicians.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 5.—Except for short intervals of wakefulness, Mrs. Kate Mannesohn of Miller street completed
a trance of six days at the Passavant hospital. Her condition, however, according to the hospital authorities,
shows marked improvement and her sleep is natural. Her complete recovery is expected within a few days.

Mrs. Mannesohn was aroused from her torpid state several times, one of the intervals of consciousness lasting for nearly ten minutes. She was unable to throw any light on the cause of her condition.

The case is now diagnosed by physicians at the hospital as a peculiar and unusual nervous condition. The first time Mrs. Mannesohn awakened
she mumbled a few unintelligible words, but spoke more clearly the second time.

PARKHURST ENTERS ARENA

Famous New York Minister Gets Into Political Game.

New York, Oct. 5.—A minister of the Gospel and a former police commissioner has jumped into the municipal political game. Rev. Dr.
Charles H. Parkhurst announced his intention of advocating from his pulpit
the election of the Republican nominee for mayor, Otto T. Bannard.
Theodore A. Bingham, who was ousted by the McClellan administration, said that he would go on the stamp in Mr. Bannard's support. General Bingham is a Republican, though appointed to office by McClellan, a Democrat. For the first time since his removal he spoke publicly last night, appearing at the Calvary Methodist church. While he denounced Taftism and the present administration and criticised Justice Gaynor as a candidate, he made not even the remotest reference to Mayor McClellan,
save in answer to a question.

STIRS UP LIVELY ROW

Man Accused of "Extreme Liberalism"

Admitted to New York Presbytery.
New York, Oct. 5.—The action of the New York presbytery in admitting Rev. Archibald Black to the ministry, despite the accusations of extreme liberalism brought against him, will be hotly contested by a number of prominent New York pastors.

Dissenting members drew up formal articles of protest, stating that objection was raised against Mr. Black on the ground that "he rejected the infallibility of supreme authority of the Scripture as rightfully determining his faith; he said he did not know as to the Virgin birth; he doubted the raising of Lazarus from the dead; he doubted the actual physical resurrection of the body from the grave."

WOULD BE EASY PICKING.

Naval Officers Say Aeroplane Makes Fine Target.

New York, Oct. 5.—American and foreign naval officers gathered here who witnessed Wilbur Wright's flight up the Hudson, while impressed with the manner in which the aviator controlled his craft, are nevertheless of the opinion that the machine would be an easy target for shrapnel fired from the big guns. This was the view taken by Commander Sims of the Minnesota, who pointed out that an aviator out of gun range would be equally out of position to drop a projectile on a battleship.

The consensus of opinion seemed to be that the aeroplane must be further perfected if it will be of great advantage in warfare, at least in an attack on the enemy's navy.

FIFTH MAN DISAPPEARED

Speeding Auto Strikes Tree and One Occupant Lands in Branches.

New York, Oct. 5.—Just before a speeding automobile struck a tree near Coney Island there were five men in the machine and after the accident the ambulance doctors found only four men, all of whom had broken ribs or other injuries.

When one of the four recovered consciousness he inquired for the fifth of the members of the party and a search revealed the unconscious man hanging over a limb of the tree where he had been hurled by the collision.
He was not seriously hurt.

CLOSE ONE FOR FLYER

Driving Wheel Tire Breaks on Pennsy's Fastest Train.

Johnstown, Pa., Oct. 5.—The Pennsylvania railroad's eighteen-hour flyer,
westbound, narrowly escaped a disastrous wreck last night near the local passenger station when the tire of one of the big driving wheels on the locomotive broke into several pieces while the train was going at full speed.
The running board immediately
above the driving wheel on the left side was wrecked. Prompt action upon the part of the engineer resulted in stopping the train before it had left the track or anyone had been injured.

HOT ROD PIERCES SKULL

Roller in Pittsburgh Steel Mill Instantly Killed at Work.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 5.—His skull pierced
by a white hot steel rod John P.
Gwyer of the Southside died instantly
while at work in Dilworth & Porter's spike mill. He was an assistant roller in the plant.

A hot rod gave an unexpected twist
and several feet of the steel passed through the man's head. His body was released with difficulty.

"Polly of the Circus," While New York theatregoers have been thoroughly aroused by the crusade instituted by church and civic organizations against the present alleged tendency to immorality on the stage as evidenced by several recent productions, "Polly of the Circus,"
which is to be presented in its original metropolitan magnitude at the Sol-

ceiving commendation by clergymen piece lies in the fact that it is as closely worked out in the minutest

detail, as any of the highest class

There are nearly 20 of the choicest musical numbers and a big chorus
both of which could be removed and there would still be a corking good play of the Western kind.

VIA WIRELESS

NOVELIZED BY THOMPSON BUCHANAN

FROM THE SUCCESSFUL PLAY, BY WINCHELL SMITH, FREDERIC THOMPSON AND PAUL ARMSTRONG

Since Jack Binns electrified the world with his C Q D wireless call for help from the steamship Republic a well deserved glamour of romance has clothed the whole subject of wireless telegraphy. The play "Via Wireless" appeared some months before the Republic disaster, and, strange to relate, the very day Lieutenant Sommers, the hero of the play, was sending out his wireless appeal for assistance from the yacht Ivesia, with no thought for his own safety, Jack Binns in the wireless room of the sinking Republic was dupliating in real life the hero incident of the play. This live romance, the story of the play, has all the thrill of the Jack Binns incident, and more, for while Binns risked his life for duty, Lieutenant Sommers risked his for love and for love of plucky Frances Durant.

CHAPTER I.

FROM the brow of the hill above the Durant works Lieutenant Sommers, United States navy, looked over the city of steel stretched away at his feet.

He saw the acres of huge buildings, their hundreds of chimneys belching forth streams of black smoke; the long streets lined with the houses of the workmen and here and there a figure that seemed in the distance pygmies hurrying to and fro.

Faintly the roar of the furnaces, the distant clang of the huge hammers and the clamor of the steel came to him. It was a scene to stir the blood of a man who loved action. For a few minutes the naval man looked in silence; then he drew a long breath and turned to the girl at his side.

"And all this will be yours some day," he said.

Frances Durant looked up with a smile.

"Yes, it does seem quite a lot for one wee bit of a girl to have, doesn't it? But I can depend upon dad to make some arrangements for running it. The steel works are his pride, you know, and he is going to leave them a monument to the name of Durant."

Lieutenant Sommers half smiled.

"Pluckiness is a lucky dog," he said irreverently.

"Lucky dog?" The girl arched her eyebrows as she asked the question.

"Why do you say that, Mr. Sommers? I don't understand."

Sommers smiled at her puzzled look, though she really had a right to be puzzled, for why a man, young, strong, good looking and an officer in the navy, with a medal for bravery already to his credit, should call another man "lucky dog" was enough to puzzle any girl of nineteen who was as pretty and independent as Frances Durant.

"I mean," exclaimed Sommers, "that he's a lucky dog because any man who is young and the manager of a place like this and has the prospects ahead of working throughout his life for you must be a lucky dog. Can't you see?"

The girl laughed in pleased fashion.

"Very clever, Mr. Sommers. But just now you are twice as lucky as Ned Pluckney, for the Durant steel plant is working for you, turning out the gun that is going to make you rich and famous."

The officer shook his head, smiling somewhat sadly.

"Famous, I hope, Miss Durant," he said, "but not rich. I am an officer in the navy, and whatever we may mean do, you know, belongs to Uncle Sam. He took us and licked us into shape, and he gives us our chance, and we must work for him all our lives."

"Well, anyhow, we are working for you now," she said with satisfaction.

The navy man shook his head, and his smile was just a little grim.

"Perhaps it might make me in love, but not with any life," he suggested.

"Don't you see? The navy is wonderful. The life is the best on earth. But let's suppose a little from the other side, and then you'll understand why I said Ned Pluckney's a lucky dog."

"Yes."

"Suppose a man is young and good looking and clever and the manager of a great plant like your father's, and suppose he's in love with you."

"It seems to me that you're a great supposer," laughed the girl.

He nodded.

"But about all I can be—a supposer. Supposing is just about as far as a naval lieutenant can ever go with the daughter of a steel millionaire."

The girl shook her head angrily.

"Seems to me," she declared, "that naval lieutenants are very queer people even if they do wear medals for bravery." Then, with one of her quick changes of mood, she looked up at him most innocently.

"Did you do much supposing, Mr. Sommers, when you plunged into the sea from the deck of your ship that winter's night to save an ordinary sailor?"

Involuntarily the man stepped toward her, his arms half outstretched. She did not move, but he stopped himself with an effort, dropping his arms.

"That plunge was nothing to one I'd like to take," he said.

"The girl looked up at him, challenge in her eyes."

"Why don't you, then, Mr. Sommers? I could never have thought you'd be afraid of anything."

"There's one thing I am afraid of," he admitted frankly.

"Yes? With a world of wonder in it."

"What is that thing, Mr. Sommers?"

"Myself!"

"Oh!" she said, then, after a pause.

"You know we are a good deal alike, for once or twice I've been a little afraid of you too."

"May I finish supposing?" he asked humbly when the pause that followed her last remark had become significant.

"Supposing? Yes; I presume so," she agreed.

"Well, as I was saying, supposing a man, young, good looking, manager of this wonderful plant, with a manager's salary and future prospects—"

"Will you please tell me, Mr. Sommers, what that can possibly have to do with—"

"Wait till I finish," he protested.

"Suppose he's in love with you?"

"Well," she said, "is it my turn now to suppose?"

He shook his head.

"It will be your turn in just a minute. You must get the other side of it."

He shook his head.

"I mean," he said, "that he's a lucky dog because any man who is young and the manager of a place like this and has the prospects ahead of working throughout his life for you must be a lucky dog. Can't you see?"

The girl laughed in pleased fashion.

"Very clever, Mr. Sommers. But just now you are twice as lucky as Ned Pluckney, for the Durant steel plant is working for you, turning out the gun that is going to make you rich and famous."

The officer shook his head, smiling somewhat sadly.

"Famous, I hope, Miss Durant," he said, "but not rich. I am an officer in the navy, and whatever we may mean do, you know, belongs to Uncle Sam. He took us and licked us into shape, and he gives us our chance, and we must work for him all our lives."

"Well, anyhow, we are working for you now," she said with satisfaction.

"From all I can hear about the works your gun is going to be a marvel. It's something to make a gun, I tell you, but it's more to invent one. Ned Pluckney makes them—makes lots of them—but you've invented one, so I think you are the lucky dog, not he."

Her admiration was so genuinely sincere that Sommers, against his will, had to take it seriously.

"It wasn't just that I meant, Miss Durant," he said, "a naval officer has a lot, I know. I thought he had everything in the world he could wish until these last few weeks, since I came here to superintend the casting of my gun."

"What has made you change?" she asked.

The man looked straight at her.

"I've met you," he said.

The girl hid her lips, for she knew her face had grown suddenly red, and that irritated her. So she turned her head after the fashion of girls of nineteen and pretended she did not understand.

"I don't see why that should alter matters," she protested airily.

"I should think meeting me and meeting other people here would make you more in love with your own fair, splendid life."

thunk you, and I don't care the least little bit for you." Now, whose would your supposition be then, Mr. Sommers?

The man shrugged his shoulders.

"Anyhow, Miss Durant," he said, "the manager of the steel plant of the owner of the steel plant can go to the girl he loves, make his fight, take his chance and, like a man, abide by the result. But the navy fellow can't do that. All he can do is to bite his lips and twiddle his thumbs and regret and suppose."

He ended it abruptly, half turning away from her, so that he did not see the girl's quick, involuntary motion toward him. He was still half turned away when she fought down the inclination of her heart to speak. At last she gulped self control.

"Of course, Mr. Sommers," she began sarcastically, "if the navy man is so selfish that he's not willing to give a girl a chance to show the stuff she's made of, if he's afraid to take any sort of plunge except a plunge for glory, why, then, must expect to receive the reward that comes to the men who won't try the reward of failure. If I were a man—her voice took on color of strength and boldness—"

"Whether I were in the navy or whether I owned a continent, I would not let any foolish selfishness of my own keep me from attempting to get anything I wanted."

"Frances!" The man whirled suddenly, catching her two hands. "You mean it?"

"Yes," she said, "of course I mean it." And her eyes invited him.

Impulsively the man leaned toward her. Then, as their faces almost seemed to touch, a cold, hard voice seemed to cut them apart.

"Ah! Good evening! I thought it was you two up here."

Angry, embarrassed, the navy lieutenant stopped back. The girl, with a woman's power of self control, seemed quite unmoved.

"Oh!" she cried gayly. "Is that you, Edward? Lieutenant Sommers and I were just talking of you. He says you're a lucky dog."

The marriage of Frances Durant and Edward Pluckney had been so long anticipated by all who knew them that the announcement of their engagement would have been received with a feeling of general relief. In the minds of their friends it would have straightened out an awkward situation. Under present circumstances, their friends did not know just how to take them. For more than a year it had been generally understood that the man of the steel in which the girl had waited anxiously, but in vain, for some definite sign, it was generally taken for granted that Mr. Durant did not object, and Mrs. Durant was openly in favor of the match.

Frances herself was the stumbling block. Time after time her intimates tried to find out, but each time, with perfect good humor, but with complete thoroughness, she blocked every attempt. Finally, their curiosity blocked, the wicked friends had decided to take the situation for granted, and so they had with perfect faith spread the report that as soon as Frances had reached her majority the couple were to be married. Even the people about the steel works had come to look at the matter in the same light. The men understood that the general manager was some day going to marry the daughter of the boss, and that made them treat him with more respect, for not only was he the manager, with power greater than most supervising managers had, but he was also expected to own the works some day himself.

Pluckney, too, was particularly careful not to contradict the general impression. He knew the influence it gave him, and also he was so tremendously ambitious and so anxious to bring the marriage about that he really believed it would be. As for the enemy must have admitted there was every reason for him to hope. The son of a friend, George Durant, who had committed suicide after ruining himself on Wall street, Edward Pluckney when a mere boy had been taken into the household of the steel millionaire. Durant had sent the boy to the best schools in the country. Boy though he was, Pluckney had appreciated the opportunity given him. He had studied hard, finally graduating from one of the best institutions at the top of his class. Then his benefactor had placed him immediately in the works. Durant had no son, and to him Edward Pluckney, with his inherent tact, his aggressiveness and his splendid mind, seemed just the kind of son he would have liked to have.

CHAPTER II.

THE big steel man was too busy with his great enterprises and his various future schemes to really study the boy. Had he studied him he was too shrewd to have found out that Pluckney's aggressiveness was not backed by downright courage and that his faithfulness to his studies and his loyalty to his family were due wholly to selfish ambitions and not at all to gratitude or love in his benefactor. As for Mrs. Durant, it had not been hard for Pluckney to fool her; good looking, manly in appearance and with his ingratiating manners, he had completely and easily won the heart of the woman. Like many other busy men, Durant depended to a great extent upon his wife's opinions of young people, so when she declared, "Edward is absolutely the finest boy I have ever known," he let just the sort of fellow that he should love to have Frances marry when she grew up. Durant had taken the boy's character for granted. As for Frances, it would have been hard for her to tell just what she did think of Edward Pluckney.

"She was a baby when he first came to the house, so she could not remember the time when she had not known him. At first she had looked on him as sort of a big brother. Pluckney himself had been the one to undeceive her on this point. Even as a boy he had outshined his plan in life. His future was too obvious for him not to see the plain and easy way. He would enter the steel works, apply himself to business, earn the commendation and then the respect and confidence of his employer and so finally pave the way for marrying Frances and inheriting the business through her."

To the scheming boy this seemed a simple plan, especially as he had so easily and quickly won Mrs. Durant over to his side. Frances he did not look on as a serious obstacle, for he was shrewd enough to know that with his splendid start and opportunity for working on her sympathies he had everything in his favor. The big brother attitude he knew was fatal. She must not look on him in that light. He must be the confident, the friend, the guide, but not the big brother in any sense. This attitude he had carefully cultivated while he was yet a child. He was always ready to go to any lengths to please her, and at first with the trustfulness of a young girl she took everything he did at its face value. Her mother, too, worked perhaps unconsciously in Pluckney's favor. She made Frances believe that everything Edward did was right and spoke of the time when he should manage the Durant steel works as a matter of course. Frances from her father had inherited a strong mechanical bent, so there was that additional bond of sympathy between them.

So matters had drifted along through her school days and Pluckney's college course until, when he came back from college to take up his life's work in the steel plant, the train was all laid and the odds were 100 to 1 in favor of the schemer coming off victorious, marrying the daughter of his benefactor and settling down as the right hand man of the steel magnate and the ultimate owner of the great plant.

Frances was barely fourteen when he entered the works, and he at once began to make her confident of his plans and aspirations for the good of her father's business. The eagerness and enthusiasm of the young man quite won the heart of the steel magnate's daughter.

"Edward is a wonder," he was accustomed to say. "Never saw such a hard worker. I thought I was a hustler, but that boy will sooner or later be showing me tricks."

How little the millionaire realized the truth of what he was saying so proudly! Such energy and enthusiasm as Pluckney displayed must have brought his advancement in any business, and when his benefactor was also his chief and he lived in the house of the steel magnate, it was not surprising that he was promoted in three years to be worked up from a place in the draughting room to the post of manager. In each new position he made good, and Durant more than ever congratulated himself on his foresight in taking up the orphan son of his friend.

But Pluckney's love affair had not progressed so rapidly. Frances was glad of his success, but somehow she had ceased to be so interested in the man as she had been when a girl. As for the steel magnate, all the glamour had worn off. Instead of taking him in a sentimental way she had been everywhere and seen practically all there was for a man to see, and, unlike many men of his profession, he could talk about it, and talk well. So it was no wonder that the girl almost immediately felt herself drawn to him. They had so many interests in common. She knew machinery and knew all about the works, and he was up in that too. Then he drove, walked, played tennis, danced and golfed better than any one she knew in Pittsburgh. So it was no wonder that from the time of Sommers' arrival Pluckney found himself put aside.

For a week the manager of the steel works did not notice the fast growing friendship. He was very busy and had little time for outside interests. Then, also, he felt so confident that he did not pay as much attention to Frances and what she was doing as he might have had he imagined there was the slightest chance of serious rivalry. That idea at first did not enter his head. Compared to his own position, he considered the post of a lieutenant in the navy insignificant. It was not until a week had gone by and he discovered that Frances had been out with the officer for several hours each day that he finally awoke to the possibility of the situation from his point of view. Then his first move was foolish. He asked Frances to go to the theater with him that night.

"I am awfully sorry, Edward," she told him; "but, you see, Mr. Sommers and I are going tonight to that play. But I am sure he would be glad to have you come along. I'll get one of the girls, and we will make up a party."

STOMACH TROUBLE

Had It For Years Until He Heard of Mi-o-na. A. A. Clarke Tells It:

"If you suffer from indigestion, belching of gas, lump of lead on stomach, biliousness, dizziness, foul breath, nervousness, constipation or headaches, give A. A. Clarke 50 cents today for a box of Mi-o-na, the celebrated stomach prescription, and if it doesn't cure you he will give you your money back. It relieves painful stomach distresses in five minutes. Read the following:

"I had stomach trouble for years. After eating I would be troubled for an hour or so with indigestion. I bought one box of Mi-o-na tablets from Gaffney Drug Co., which completely cured me. That was 12 months ago and to this day I have not been troubled again." J. B. Haskley, Gaffney, S. C., April 20, 1909.

Mi-o-na is the best prescription for stomach trouble ever written; not only does it give quick relief, but it cures permanently because it thoroughly cleanses, renovates, builds up and puts elasticity into the stomach and bowels. Mi-o-na is put up in tablet form and is small and easy to swallow. Sold by leading druggists everywhere and in Connelville by A. A. Clarke who rigidly guarantees them. Test sample free. Address Booth's Mi-o-na, Buffalo, N. Y.

Prepare For Cold Weather

Winter is fast approaching. One of the most important parts of a man's or woman's winter clothing is Underwear, and the best place to buy it that we know of is at Union Supply Company stores. The Fall lines of Underwear for men, women and children are now all in. They have been purchased from the best manufacturers in America. The stocks of this class of goods taken out of our sixty-three stores and put in one pile would look almost as big as Pine Knob, would make a big double-header train. Buying it in such large quantities and paying cash for it naturally gives us a great advantage as to price. Our customers get the benefit of all this. We are selling Underwear in our stores cheaper and have a greater variety, we believe, than you can find elsewhere.

THE STARS OF THE DETROIT TIGERS, CHAMPIONS OF THE AMERICAN LEAGUE

Manager Hughy Jennings of the Detroit Tigers is planning a lot of faith in two of his outfielders to do great work in the coming world's series against Pittsburgh. They are Ty Cobb, the "Georgia Peach," and "Walton" Sam Crawford. Crawford guards left garden and Cobb right, with Davy Jones in the middle.

Both Cobb and Crawford are formidable sluggers. Cobb led the American league with an average of .360, or thereabouts, while Crawford was well over the 300 mark.

While Cobb and Crawford wield their little willows, Jennings will decorate the sidelines with his famous "A-h-e-e." Cobb, by the way, is a gentlemanly little mascot who runs the bases like a wild engine and has spiked more men in the American league than any other player. Cobb does not spike them intentionally, but, then, he does not sidestep when headed for a cushion. Imagine the noise it will make when Little Tyros plows into big Honus Wagner at second.

The Tigers increased their lead in the Connellsville Duckpin League last night by taking two of the three games from the Athletics on the Temple alleys. The Tigers gobbled in the first two of the set and looked like easy winners but the Athletics took a big brace in the final struggle and escaped a whitewash.

With Beehner and Crowley in the lineup the Tigers presented their most formidable offense. Both of these men rolled games better than 100, while Beehner came within six pins of touching W. R. Long's record for a high total score. Friday evening the Cubs and Topnotchers will settle the question of second place. The score:

WOULDN'T ARREST WOOD

Speeds to Hospital With Wounded Man in His Auto.

New York, Oct. 5.—A bicycle policeman who caught up with a speeding automobile after a four-mile chase found that it contained Major General Leonard Wood, U. S. A., who was carrying to a hospital a man who ran out in front of the machine on Fifth avenue and had been slightly injured.

"I fought under you at Mifflinburg," said the policeman, saluting General Wood, "and I shouldn't care to arrest you now." The injured man did not desire to make a complaint and the policeman departed after taking the number of the automobile.
